

Another Star

How cold the wind blows now how soft the music played
 How small the world's become how dark the light must fade
 How frozen are those lips that once were red as wine
 How white those arms that once embraced with mine

How wide those eyes do stare deep in the night
 How can I hold you dear and hold you oh so tight
 You slip away from me into the darkened well
 And dreams and oaths are swallowed in the deep dark swell.

Chorus

*There is another star that's shining down on me
 Another light in the falling night gleams out across the sea
 There is another dream or so it seems waiting for you
 Another heart so true.*

No journey is too long, no obstacle too strong
 There is no sense of grief, No shortage of belief
 I hold your hand in mine you are my valentine
 And now together love we're sailing far away

There is a destiny a truly meant to be another day
 Of come what may all chase the tears away
 Across the ocean wide to the other side
 A land so fair and free as air, where I will be your bride

Chorus

And we will try to be the very best that we
 Can hope to be if we survive this awful tragedy
 But cold the wind blows now the Arctic Stars aglow
 Our ship is gone into the endless void below

Your breath is still my love, yours hands so cold
 Ours is a story others will unfold
 As time will pass my dear our love will shine
 Another star is born tonight that star is mine.

Note; This song was originally titled "Titanic"